About one third of Mizrahi's 80 patients with schizophrenia smoke pot, despite her warnings. Some tell her they feel paranoid and think others can read their thoughts when they're high so they only smoke alone. If they refuse to give up marijuana she urges them to, at the very least, try a different strain.